

QA INTERVIEW ACCELERATOR

"Tell Me About Yourself" — Elevator Pitch Template

Nail the most common opening question with a confident 60-second pitch.

Introduction

"Tell me about yourself" opens most interviews and sets the tone. A crisp, confident pitch frames the whole conversation in your favour. This template gives you a repeatable formula.

Instructions

- Aim for 60–90 seconds — focused, not a life story.
- Tailor the ending to the specific role.
- Practise until it sounds natural, not memorised.

The Formula (Present → Past → Future)

Part	What to say
Present	Who you are now and your focus as a tester
Past	Relevant experience, projects or this course — with a highlight
Future	Why this role/company, and what you want to bring

Worked Example

"I am a QA tester focused on practical, risk-based testing. Over the last few months I completed a structured testing programme where I built a full portfolio — test plans, API tests in Postman, and professional bug reports. I am drawn to this role because you value quality early in the process, and I am keen to bring my eye for detail and clear communication to your team."

Blank Reusable Template

- Present: "I am a [role] focused on ____."

- Past: "Recently I ____, where I ____ [highlight]."
- Future: "I am excited about this role because ____, and I want to bring ____."

Practical Exercise

Write your pitch using the template, then record yourself delivering it. Trim anything that takes you over 90 seconds.

Best Practices

- Open with confidence and a clear identity.
- Include one concrete highlight.
- Connect the ending to the company.

Common Mistakes

- Reciting your whole CV chronologically.
- Going on too long.
- A generic pitch that ignores the role.

INSIDE STLC PRO TIP

The interviewer decides how the rest of the conversation feels in your first 60 seconds. A calm, structured pitch buys you goodwill for everything that follows.
